

The future of museums in rapidly changing communities

ICOM international council
of museums

ICOM international
council
of museums
UAE المجلس الدولي للمتاحف أيكوم - الإمارات

11th ♦ 17th November ♦ Dubai ♦ United Arab Emirates

Session Information

Ruriko Tsuchida

tsuchida.ruriko.53@city.toyama.lg.jp

Committee: GLASS - International Committee for Museums and Collections of Glass

Selected Session: BC-5 - GLASS

Session Title: Future Museums of Glass and Rapidly changing Communities

Short description: Although the Corona disaster that has threatened us in recent years has finally come to an end, the social environment around us is changing rapidly and is by no means stable, with natural disasters in various regions, destruction caused by war and global political instability.

However, in this environment, the arts have always served as a unique communication tool to connect people in a friendly and peaceful manner, transcending cultures and ethnic groups. We look forward to your presentation of examples of outstanding communication activities in your museum, institution or academic institution, including ongoing or innovative educational outreach through glass art and new ways to engage viewers. By sharing these initiatives with our members, who have glass collections from around the world, we hope to contribute to the international community by further expanding the museum as a place of communication that is close to each of our communities.

Call for Papers? No